GOLD DREDGING.

S. F. Mining & Engineering Review: The industry of gold dredging in the State of California is rapidly assuming a position that entitles it to rank among the permanent new industrial gold reduction processes operated by machinery worked upon a modern, large and most economical scale in a place second to none in importance both now, and to a much greater extent, in the future. Brought here some few years ago from New Zealand by a successful operator there, the quick-witted, intelligent American mining engineer was not slow to see the weak points in the imported machine, (good in many respects as it undoubtedly was) so that the Leviathan electrical dredges now being built would probably much outstrip a modern New Zealander, while Lord Macaulay's celebrated historical hero from that Isle, who is to gaze in the future upon the ruins of London, from the old bridge, would look upon the Americanized modern dredge as a new development of the "black art," devised to make men rich "beyond the dream of avarice" without risk, and at moderate cost.

It is not too much to say that California stands to-day to win all that unfair and almost absurd legislation has caused her to lose in the past by restricting hydraulic mining for winning gold, presumably in a wasteful manner, by the gradual development of dredging which, despite improvements already made, may without doubt be considered yet in its infancy, both in regard to construction in many minor details of the machine itself, and especially in its application to the successful saving of fine gold in poor gravel of what may be now called difficult ground.

There is no doubt whatever, that like the refractory ore of the smelter in the past, so will the "difficult ground" of the dredger gradually disappear "like the fleeting mists of the morning before the rising sun."

When we remember the extortionate milling, smelting and railroad charges of the past, and how the poor but honest miner was at the mercy of the custom-ore buyers, and which he to some extent in isolated districts still is, it is impossible to avoid a feeling of thankfulness for the metallurgical relief afforded and necessarily the commercial gains shown by the modern methods of gold reduction by the use of cyanide used, perhaps to the greatest extent by gold dredges in very low grade gravel, for this, the last device so far, is a veritable scavenger, sweeping up the wet "crumb that remains" and by "concourse of atoms" adding in a tangible way to the wealth of the community at a remarkably low first operating cost. It is also to be remembered that this method attacks and renders valuable, ground that formerly was and now, by any other method of reduction is absolutely without value, and until quite lately (when dredging reversed the old order of things), might have remained so until the "crack of doom."

Enemies Quite Neighborly

John Widgeon, the field collector of the Maryland Academy of Sciences has had many experiences while collecting the specimens for the museum. He has captured almost every species of reptile, both poisonous and otherwise, to be found in the state, and in their pursuit has noticed many peculiarities.

"It is remarkable," he says, "how some of the deadliest enemies live in close proximity to each other. Several years ago while exploring Kent Island I ventured up a forty-foot hickory tree to inspect a large fish-hawk's nest. When almost to the nest I was surprised to see an enormous black snake wrapped around the heavy sticks at the bottom of the bulky nest. The snake, although at such an unusual distance from the ground, did not lose its presence of mind, but dropped gracefully from limb to limb until it reached the ground. Continuing to the nest I found a large family of field mice. Above this was a nest full of little sparrows, and upon the top of the hawk's nest were three young hawks just hatched.—Baltimore Sun.

Gold Mines in The Andies.

Sir Martin Conway, who has recently returned to London from carrying out extensive explorations in South America, gives some most interesting particulars of the wonderful gold deposits of the Andes, reports in an English paper.

Sir Martin said that along the eastern slope of the Andes, in Peru and Bolivia, run many rivers rich in gold. In the time of the Incas and during the early days of the Spanish settlement gold was washed from the river sands first by the natives and afterwards by the Spaniards. The work was, however, exceedingly arduous owing to the inaccessibility of the locality and the consequent difficulties of transporting food and other necessities to the scene of operations.

Various attempts, continued Sir Martin, had since been made to work the deposits, but while all the companies formed for the purpose found gold, they nearly all failed to work at a profit. In recent years, however, two or three companies, which had taken up the problem skillfully, were successful.

The explorer further stated that in the Peruvian province of Santha 290 gold discoveries of importance have been made. The neighboring province of Carabaya is equally rich. On the other hand, the gold-bearing districts are not a poor man's country. They are not place for a man with a simple prospector's outfit. The difficulty of transport, to say nothing of fever and hostile Indians, is too great a problem to be solved by the individual miner.

The Iri R. Hicks 1901 Almanac.

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Iri Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warnings of every great storm, flood, cold wave and drought, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the Gulf coasts. The 1901 Almanac, by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engravings, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hicks' journal, Words and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company, 2201 Locust Street, St. Louis, Mo.

It appears that banks were in existence, says an exchange, in Rome, Greece, Babylon, China and other ancient places before the Christian era. The earliest records of European banks now in existence are those of the Bank of Venice, founded in A. D., 1711; the Bank of Barcelona, founded in 1401; the Bank of Geneva, founded in 1407; and the Bank of Amsterdam, in 1609. The oldest bank notes of which there is any record were issued in China as far back as 2657 B. C. The Chinese called it "flying money" and they were in form similar to the notes of the present time. They bore such mottoes as "Produce all you can," "Spend with economy," and the like. These bills bore on the face the penalty for making imitations of them.

A unique but profitable way of planting and caring for young trees is reported by Abe Van Osdel of Mission Hill, near Yankton, N. D. Out of 1500 planted last year he lost but sixteen. A tin can is inserted in the earth near the tree. Around the tree trunks near the roots he winds a strip of heavy texture, and is inserted in the can, which is filled with water. The can is covered with a heavy mulch to prevent evaporation. The idea is that the tree draws the moisture from the can through the wet rag and so stands the dryness better. This plan is used in Holland, where tree culture is a great success.

Cure for Felon.

A man who has suffered much from felons gives us the following as an infallible remedy for the painful afflictions: Get a lime or lemon and cut the end off. By the use of a finger work the pulp until it is soft. Put in pulverized salt and then insert the finger bearing the felon, binding it firmly in place. Renew if necessary until relief is obtained.

It is claimed that the washings from the dumps of gravel taken from beneath the ice at Dawson average thirty cents to the pan.
